Concerning Bolesław Grzewiński

In 1939, he lived in Wilno as a soldier of the Polish Army and worked there as a bandmaster. In 1939, he moved to Częstochowa and took up residence with his son and wife on a church premises ... , where he worked as an organist. In ... he was arrested by the Gestapo, together with the priests of that church, for issuing Christian birth certificates to Jews. After bestial interrogations at a Gestapo station (a mention relating to this was made in the documents of the Commission for the Investigation of Nazi Crimes, most likely for 1954-1955, the Częstochowa area), he was transported to Auschwitz. Information about the murder of Bolesław Grzewiński at Auschwitz comes from a priest who survived internment at that camp.
